WIRES DOWN ON CAPE COD AS RESULT OF STORM

Two Boats Off Provincetown
Breakwater in Danger of Going to Pieces.

Provincetown, Mass., Jan. 13.—A gasoline supply boat, and a sloop went ashore at the Provincetown breakwater late last night. They were discovered by the crew of the Wood End life saving station, and Capt. George Baker, with a crew, have started in a life boat to make an attempt at rescue.
The life savers estimate that there are six men on each boat, and their position is regarded as perilous, as each boat threatens to go to pieces by pounding in the surf on the breakwater.

No further details as to the rescue have been received, as the 50 miles of wire connecting the life saving stations along Cape Cod, from Provincetown to Chatham, went out of commission in the storm, early this morning.

"PEG O' MY HEART"

Owing to the enormous demand for seats for the last two weeks of the record breaking run of "Peg O' My Heart" at the Cort Theatre, Boston, the management announces an additional week beginning Monday, Jan. 18. This will positively be the last week for "Peg" as Morosco's charming comedy must give way to John Cort's latest musical farce, "What's Going On," which Mr. Cort postponed for a week in order to meet the demand of the Boston and suburban playgoers for another week of "Peg."

This production intact will positively close Saturday evening, Jan. 24, playing a week's engagement at the Providence Opera House, three weeks in New York, then moving to the Adelphi Theatre, Philadelphia, for the remainder of the season.

An innovation for the last week will be a new scale of popular prices, for the evenings the best seats will be at $1.50 and the Wednesday matinee, $1.

Following "Peg O' My Heart" John Cort will bring to the Cort Theatre, Jan. 25, "What's Going On," a new musical farce. William B. Clifford has written the book and Miles Overholt the lyrics. William Boraine and Josephine Janssen have written the music of which there are some fifteen jolly hitting tunes.

The story has to do with a German inn keeper in the Catskill mountains, who has as his guests composers, poets, and others that have long overshadowed him. He has about a dozen of financial recompense from them when Madame Pom Pom, a modiste, and her maid, arrive. The landlady imagines that they are important personages of high social standing and wealth.

Stopping in the hotel is a young baronet and the landlady sees a way out of his financial embarrassment by arranging a wedding between the presumable heiress and the baronet. The complications that ensue cause many ludicrous situations that finally develop into an agreeable love affair, and judging from gleanings from the New York press, "What's Going On" will be a worthy successor to the greatest of the modern comedies, "Peg O' My Heart."

Mrs. Cort has gathered together a cast that commands attention, among them being Walter Lawrence, William Burress, Frances Cameron, Roy Atwell, Carrie Graham Burress, Maude Beatty, Doris and Dixon and a chorus of unusual attractiveness.

Mrs. Annette Sides and Miss Grace Sides returned to their home in this city today after passing several weeks in New York as the guests of friends.

OF INTEREST TO
PORTSMOUTHITESCalendar Tells Story of Helen Seavey Quilting Party.

A most attractive calendar has been presented this year by the Continental Fire Insurance Company of New York, which pictures the scene, "First Stars and Stripes on the Ocean," an affair given by the famous Helen Seavey Quilting Party. The following is of historic interest to Portsmouthites:

On the very day, June 14, 1777, now celebrated as Flag Day, on which Congress passed the resolution authorizing the national flag, Captain John Paul Jones was appointed Commander of the Ranger, which was fitting out for service at Portsmouth, N. H.

When this news reached Portsmouth, some of the young ladies of that place (tradition names five—Mary Langdon, Augusta Pierce, Caroline Chandler, Dorothy Hall and Helen Seavey) made a flag from "pieces of their best silk gowns" for presentation to Jones who was in Boston at the time. He made the trip from Boston to Portsmouth for the purpose of receiving and displaying the colors, which event occurred, so it is recorded, July 4, 1777, the first anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The calendar picture shows this impressive ceremony taking place on the deck of the Ranger, the commander, in the presence of the young ladies, unfurling the flag himself.

Other events of historical interest in connection with this flag was its first appearance on the ocean, Nov. 1, 1777, when the Ranger set sail to carry the message, "Burgoyne has surrendered" to the King of France, the voyage lasting 32 days, Jones landing at Nantes, Dec. 2, 1777. It received the first salute by a foreign naval power, Feb. 14, 1778, in Brest Roads when the Ranger sailed through the French fleet. It waved over the Ranger when she defeated the Drake and the Bon Homme Richard, when she conquered the Saryps.

Augustus C. Buell in his "History of Paul Jones" says: "When Jones returned to this country in Feb. 1781, he found Miss Langdon of the 'quilting party' a guest of the Ross family whose house was always his home in Philadelphia. By way of apology he explained to her that his most ardent desire had been to bring that flag back to America, with all its glories, and give it back undiminished into the fair hands that had given it to him nearly four years before. 'But, Miss Mary,' he said, 'I couldn't bear to strip it from the poor old ship in her last agony; nor could I deny to my dead on her decks, who had given their lives to keep it flying, the glory of taking it with them."

"You did exactly right, Commodore," exclaimed Miss Langdon, "that flag is just where we all wish it to be—flying at the bottom of the sea over the only ship that ever sunk in Victory."

AMERICAN CARGO TO SAIL FROM
AUSTRALIAEmbargo by Great Britain
Lifted on Government's Assurance That Product
Will Not Be Re-
Exported.

The trouble over the British embargo on the Boston owned clipper ship Aryan, now at Sydney, Australia, has been satisfactorily adjusted and Carver, Wariner, and Cavanaugh attorneys for the ship's owners last night, received word from Washington that the British government, through its Ambassador accepted the assurances of the Boston attorneys as to the cargo of the Aryan, and that no further objection would be made by the English authorities to the sailing of the vessel with 10,000 bales of merino wool for Boston.

The Aryan, the last of the so-called American clipper ships, arrived on November 22 at Sydney, where she had been ordered by her owner, Eugene B. Carver, of Brookline, senior member of the firm, to get 10,000 bales of merino wool consigned to New England mills. But the embargo kept the ship from sailing.

Mr. Carver vigorously protested against the action of the Australian government and for nearly two months the status of the ship and the freight was the subject of correspondence between the United States and Great Britain.

The owners contended that Great Britain had no right under existing commercial treaties to establish against citizens of the United States an embargo of any Australian product which was not in effect against all other nations.

LEGISLATURE REMOVES INSURANCE COMMISSIONER

Concord, Jan. 12.—Representative Morrill of Concord introduced into the legislature this morning an address for the removal of Insurance Commissioner Joseph H. Warren, who was recently appointed by Gov. Samuel E. Parker. The address is as follows: "To His Excellency Rolland H. Spaulding, Governor of the State of New Hampshire:

"The senate and house of representatives in general court convened, satisfied that the public good requires that Joseph H. Warren, Insurance Commissioner, should no longer hold and retain said office, respectfully address and request your excellency, with the advice and consent of the council, to remove therefrom the said Joseph H. Warren."

The address presented by Representative Morrill of Concord for the removal of Joseph H. Warren as insurance commissioner, occasioned a very exciting debate, which was participated in by Representative Brennan of Portsmouth and Representative Ahern of Concord, who led the fight against the passage of the address, stating that it was pure partisanship, a practically unused method and a relic of the past.

Mr. Brennan stated it was returning to methods of forty years ago, which people had long since discarded. Mr. Morrill of Concord, the author of the address, in reply stated that it was not a partisanship measure, that Mr. Warren was unfit for the place, that his appointment was a political one, and that the efficiency of the department demanded his removal. Mr. Lyford of Concord also spoke in favor of the passage of the resolution and Mr. Conch of Concord defended the resolution in the interests of efficiency, good government, and for the good of our insurance department and the people.

Representative Pender of Portsmouth also spoke in favor of the resolution.

Vote to Oust 218 To 136

Representative Wood of Portsmouth stated that he was in favor of having this proposition submitted to a committee to investigate.

Then Representative Ahern of Concord moved that the resolution be indefinitely postponed.

On a ye and nay vote, those voting in the affirmative were 143, and 235 voted in the negative. It was a purely party vote, with the exception of four Republican representatives from Rochester, who voted in favor of indefinite postponement.

Then Representative Coby of Temple, a Progressive, offered an amendment providing that a committee to investigate the fitness of Mr. Warren. This was voted down by a vote of 102 to 102.

Then came the vote on the final passage of the address, which was taken by division, as Mr. Ahern stated he did not wish to delay the house, the result being 218 in the affirmative and 136 in the negative, and the address passed.

It will now go to the senate, and then to the governor and council to be signed and approved.

There was much feeling displayed during the debate. There was a large attendance of members, who took an earnest interest in the outcome.

The Senate Concurred

The senate this afternoon, following a spirited debate, concurred with the house in legislating Joseph Warren out of the office of insurance commissioner. The vote stood 14 to 6 in favor in passage of the resolution. Senator Barney of Rochester passed in the only opposition vote among the Republican senators.

BOLD ASSAULT ON LITTLE GIRL

A bold assault was prevented Tuesday evening by the timely arrival of assistance in response to the frightened cry of the little victim.

The assault took place early Tuesday evening when Roscoe Cohen, aged 8 years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Cohen of Hanover street, was returning home from the Jewish school.

She was passing the corner of Bridge street, when a man suddenly stepped out, and grabbed her and placing his hand over her mouth lifted her from the ground and started down Bridge street. The child, when she was first grabbed, shrieked with fright and this was heard by three young men coming out of the Public Library, and they promptly ran to investigate. They saw the man running down the street with the child and they immediately gave chase, and when he saw the men he dropped the child in the street and continued on down Bridge street on the run.

The men stopped to lift the child from the mud, and after hearing her story one took her home and the others continued the pursuit, but he had made good his escape.

The police were notified and the night men notified, and later officer Anderson picked up a man at the depot answering the child's description of her assailant, and he gave his name as Patrick Walsh aged 31, and claimed to belong down in Maine. Later Mr. Cohen brought the little child to the police station, and she promptly identified Walsh as the man who attempted to kidnap her.

Walsh, who was in the station the night before as a lodger, denies that he ever saw the girl and claims he was not around that section of the city. He has been charged with assault and will be arraigned before Judge Torrey in court today. When arrested he had two bottles of liquor on him, although he was broke before he was released from the station that morning.

REDUCE HOUSEHOLD EXPENSES!

Make Your Own Cough Medicine

The difference in buying one of the most efficient, latest and up-to-date cough and cold remedies (which can be made at home), and buying the old, ordinary, ready-made kinds, is that with the new one you get all pure medicine, instead of buying a large proportion of sugar and water, besides paying for bottles, boxes and labels; and it usually requires 2 to 3 bottles of the old-fashioned, ready-made remedies to break up a cough or cold, while 2 ounces (50c worth) of Schiffmann's new Concentrated Expectantant, which is so strongly concentrated that 2 ounces, when mixed at home with simply one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of water, make a full pint (16 ounces) of excellent cough remedy, and will be sufficient to probably last the whole family the entire winter. It positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics, and is so pleasant that children like to take it. Arrangements have been made with drug store named below to refund the money to any person who finds it does not give perfect satisfaction, or if it is not found the very best remedy ever used for coughs, colds, bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and hoarseness. You will be the sole judge, and under the positive guarantee by these druggists, absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. For sale here by Tilton Drug Co.

CHILDREN HATE PILLS, CALOMEL AND CASTOR OIL

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

The People's Responsibility.

Numerous states have just inaugurated their governors and the legislatures have settled down to business, and it is interesting to note that some of the chief executives in their inaugural addresses have dared to broach the subject of economy in concrete form. Economy in the abstract is always popular with executives, legislators and the people, and is preached from year's end to year's end, but when it comes to its practical application there is usually a different attitude all along the line, with the result that extravagant appropriations and expenditures continue.

This is followed by rates of taxation of which the people complain, but the condition is one for which they are very largely to blame. They shout for better roads and more of them, and for everything else that is going in the way of modern improvements, ignoring in the ardor of their campaigns the element of expense, and when the bills are presented in the form of taxes a cry of distress goes up and blame is heaped upon the men who made the appropriations.

It is therefore well that attention should be called, as it has been by some of the governors on taking office, to the need of economy in concrete form. One emphasized the danger of too much legislation and the need of repealing unwise and useless laws. He said: "We cannot expect to regulate all the social evils of the state at one sitting, but should endeavor to select the more salient and important subjects." Another executive devoted his address almost entirely to the necessity of improving the administration of the business affairs of the state, reminding the legislators that the limit which should be put on state expenditures had been reached.

These manifestations of concern are reassuring, but the people must not forget that they have a large share in the work of bringing about reform and true economy. If they continue to clamor for everything in sight the legislatures will in most cases accommodate them, with the result that not only will many foolish laws be enacted, but expenses will rise to the troublesome point. States, like individuals, should strive to live within their means, but it is impossible for governors and legislatures to effect this without the support of the people. If expenses are to be curtailed demands must be lessened, and here the people can be supreme if they will be.

An organization has been incorporated in New York to work for the abolition of capital punishment in that state. But there are many people in New York, as well as the other states, who feel that it might be well to give capital punishment a fair trial before abolishing it. It is claimed by those who wish to do away with it that it is not a deterrent of murder, but as much can be said of the practice, altogether too common, of making a farce of the law, as the columns of the daily papers attest.

Ex-President Taft agrees with President Elliott of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad that the so-called "regulation" of railroads by law has been carried too far and that the pendulum must now swing the other way, as it has begun to do. The thing to be guarded against now is too much of a swing the other way. There are dangers in both directions.

Those who have eliminated danger from the seas and the railroads are now busy fixing it up so there will never be any more subway accidents. It is a fortunate world that contains so many individuals who know just how everything should be done.

An exchange remarks that Mr. Rockefeller's money is not a servant, but a master which will never let him out of its sight or call. And what a lot of men there are trying to place themselves in the same sort of bondage.

It is feared in some quarters that the price of wheat may yet compel people to eat corn bread. But no compulsion will ever be necessary in the case of such corn bread as some women know how to make.

Not all will agree with all parts of President Wilson's speech at Indianapolis, but it is very generally agreed that he made a speech that has been heard around the country if not around the world.

Recent heavy storms greatly damaged the tobacco crop in Cuba, the loss being almost total in some parts of the island. But "pure Havanas" will continue to be just as plentiful as ever.

All the warring nations of Europe claim to be fighting in self-defense, in which respect, as well as in some others, they resemble a gang of toughs engaged in a street fight.

CURRENT OPINION

Why Warlike Nations Decline in the Quality of Populations.

After a long period of continuous war the Roman empire found difficulty in refilling the emptied military ranks with efficient Roman soldiers. Military selection had taken the strongest and left the empire without the able-bodied citizen youth who would have been their descendants.

Our own civil war took a million men, some of the men with the finest qualities. Many of them left no descendants. Those who were left were left behind. North and south the nation has suffered by this loss. The new generation of men and women since the war has taken the nation's problems into their hands, but these are hands not so strong or so able as though the men of today stood shoulder to shoulder with the men that might have been.

The men who died in that war had better stuff in them than the father of the average man of today. Those states which lost most of their young blood will not recover for centuries, perhaps never. We can never know how great our actual loss has been.

The warlike nation of today is the decadent nation of tomorrow. The nations that are at war all are paying the same penalty. Reversed selection in eugenics will handicap every one of them.—By David Starr Jordan, Former President of Leland Stanford University.

SUFFRAGE IS DEFEATED BY VOTE OF HOUSE

Resolution Lost by 224 to 174—Stevens of N. H. Favors the Measure.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The House of Representatives tonight by a vote of 224 to 174 refused to submit to the states the amendment to the Federal Constitution to enfranchise women. This is the first time that the question has come to a vote in the national house although on March 19 last, the Senate rejected the same proposal.

Congressman Raymond B. Stevens of New Hampshire spoke in defense of the resolution. He said in part: "I am not one of those who expect to secure the millennium of granting suffrage to women, nor do I expect to see any great and immediate improvement in politics. Even if the immediate result of doubling the number of voters in the country were to make the political action of the state even less intelligent and efficient than it is today still I should vote for it, with the certainty that in the long run the results would be beneficial. Manly advances by opportunities and responsibilities."

"Today the chief activity of the government is in domestic fields that not only affect women as much as men, but in many of which women are as well qualified to take part as men. The care and protection of children, sanitation, public health, pure foods and pure fabrics, hours and conditions of labor of women and children are notable examples of subjects for national action which women are especially interested in and informed about. Women have brains, and they will bring to these questions a larger measure than men have of sympathy and Christian charity."

"Equal suffrage for men and women is a national question. To deprive any person in this nation of the right to vote, merely because of sex, is a national wrong."

BIG STORM ALL ALONG COAST

No Wrecks Reported, But Many Vessels Seek Shelter
in Harbors.

At last we have snow again! The northeast winds which have prevailed the past two or three days, brought rain Tuesday, which early this morning turned to sleet and then to snow. With a decreasing temperature, and an increasing wind, the indications were that the storm would continue throughout the day, but with a gradual shift of the wind to the northwest, the snow ceased falling shortly before noon.

Although the trains were on time this morning, the cars on the local electric road, and on the Atlantic Shore Line, ran behind schedule. The tide was extremely high, and many cellars of stores on the water front were flooded with water.

A 72-mile northeast wind was sweeping Cape Cod this morning, with a very rough sea flowing. No shipwrecks have been reported, but several steamers have sought shelter in the harbors all along the coast. The steamship Northland, which runs between New York and Portland, was forced to drop anchor in the Bass river, Cape Cod.

At Provincetown two small boats were in danger of being destroyed by their pounding against the breakwater, and life savers went to the rescue of their crews. The wires connecting the life saving stations for 50 miles along Cape Cod, between Provincetown and Chatham, were rendered useless by the gale.

During the high wind Tuesday night six or seven are lights around the prison, at the navy yard, were blown out of commission. A temporary building, with a firm foundation, which has been used in connection with ice cutting on the yard ponds, was lifted from its foundation, and carried into the road, several feet away. It required the services of fifty men to replace it on its original site. The weatherman promises fair weather for tonight and Thursday.

His early education was gained in the public schools of his native city, after which he worked with his father, who conducted a restaurant and bakery on Ladd street. Later he engaged in business for himself and conducted the restaurant near the Boston & Maine railroad, now managed by Victor Murphy, for upwards of a quarter of a century. The following suggestion by a large English Seed House might well be adopted by everybody having a plot of ground the coming season.

The stupendous conflict in which almost the whole of Europe is engaged, and the constant vicissitudes of the war, have dwarfed many features of everyday life which under normal conditions would demand attention. Although there can be little doubt as to the final issue, the nation from the very commencement grasped the fact that, for the good of all concerned, business must be carried on in as complete a manner as circumstances will permit, and in no section of trade is this more true than in the case of the great industry with which our House has been so prominently identified for more than a century.

The immense importance of producing at home foodstuffs of all kinds, on as extensive a scale as possible, was realized at the outset, and large quantities of vegetable seeds were supplied by us to clients throughout the kingdom in August last. We wish to point out, however, that, valuable as the produce from the seed then sown has been (as evidenced by the unique Collection of Vegetables grown from seed sown since war was declared, which we exhibited at the Royal Horticultural Society's Show on November 17), it is but a drop in the bucket compared with the requirements of the near future, and those who have ground available will do wisely to sow at least half as much again as usual, not only to furnish individual needs but to provide against any national emergency. Market Growers are likely to reap a great advantage by largely extending the area which they generally cultivate, in view of the certainty of very limited consignments from the Continent.

COMMITTEE WILL INVESTIGATE STATE HOSPITAL

Concord, Jan. 12.—Representative Benjamin W. Couch of Concord introduced into the house this morning a resolution providing for an investigation of the state hospital and that said investigation be conducted by three men appointed by the governor and council.

The resolution calls for a most thorough and sweeping investigation of affairs at the state asylum. Mr. Couch moved that the resolution be passed under a suspension of the rules. On motion of Representative Leola Chase of Concord the rules were suspended and the joint resolution was passed unanimously by the house without being printed or sent to a committee.

The resolution provides that a committee of three, appointed by the governor and council, shall have full power to subpoena witnesses, send for papers, etc., to secure any evidence necessary.

In the senate this morning Senator Drake of Pittsfield introduced a bill amending the act creating the public service commission by striking out that portion pertaining to the transmitting of electric energy developed from the water power of the Connecticut river and providing that all railroad corporations doing business in the state may transmit electrical energy beyond the confines of the state for the purpose of operating its roads between some points in the state and any point on their line outside the state.

Senator Musgrove of Hanover introduced a bill amending the law pertaining to the fish and game department and providing that all of the revenue derived by the department shall be devoted in and made available for that department.

In the senate the committee on elections, consisting of Senators Varney, Woodbury, Clark, Lucier and Smith, reported with reference to the vacancy existing in District No. 6 by recommending the election of Edwin H. Shannon, Republican, of Laconia.

At the last election in this district Willis J. Sanborn of Sanborn, Democrat, was declared elected on the face of the returns, whereupon Mr. Shannon, the Republican candidate, called for a recount. This showed Mr. Shannon's election by four votes, but in the meantime it developed that Mr. Sanborn could not legally hold his office under the constitutional requirements, as he had lived in the state only four and a half years; whereas the constitution requires seven. Mr. Shannon was prepared to contest the election of Mr. Sanborn, whereupon the latter resigned, and the senate today unanimously voted to seat Mr. Shannon, the Republican candidate.

Representative John C. Bickford of Manchester today introduced House Bill No. 23, an act to establish a municipal court in the city of Manchester.

The act provides for the abolishment of the present district court, which takes in Manchester and Bedford, and makes a separate and distinct court for the city of Manchester. Under the provisions of the proposed bill the judge of the municipal court in the city of Manchester has the same powers and jurisdiction as is conferred upon the present judge of the Manchester district court.

The new law provides that the salary shall be $1500 a year, in place of $1500 as paid at present. The salary of the associate justice is raised from $300 to $350, and the clerk's salary remains at its present figure, $750.

The bill, if passed, will go into effect March 1 next.

The special committee of one from each county, appointed to select a chaplain, met this noon, after recess of the house, and voted as follows:

The Rev. Edward A. Durham of Tilton.

The Rev. Henry B. McDougall of Franklin.

And Mr. Durham having a majority of the votes cast, will be the candidate for chaplain presented by the committee to the house.

The Rev. Mr. Durham is a Methodist minister and is located at Tilton. The Rev. Mr. McDougall was a Unitarian minister whose pastorate is at Franklin.

MAN AND WIFE HELD IN $500 BONDS EACH

Somersworth Couple Await Grand Jury Action on Attempted Murder Charge.

Somersworth, N. H., Jan. 12.—The continued case against Mrs. Anna Ellis as principal, and her husband, Hercules Ellis, as accessory, on the charge of attempting to murder Antonio Bouris January 5, was concluded in the district court today. Each was held in $500 bonds for grand jury action.

Testimony was introduced today to show that Hercules was jealous of Bouris and had made threats to kill him, if he did not leave town, also to leave his wife, if Bouris remained here. It was shown that Hercules purchased at a local store the revolver that was taken from his wife at the time of their arrest.

Mrs. J. J. Goodwin of Broadstreet who has been seriously ill is much improved which will be pleasing news to her many friends.

Great Suffering Among Austrian Soldiers

BY NELLIE BLY

The following dispatch was sent by Miss Nellie Bly, Special Correspondent of the International News Telegraph Service on the Austrian firing line near Przemyśl, the Austrian fortress now invested by Russians. The dispatch was written on board the train of the hospital train as it was proceeding from Przemyśl to Budapest.

On Route to Budapest, Nov. 3.—I did not tire of the long day though a worm could have crawled out my way and won the blue ribbon. To think of a small's pace in comparison is to think of the small as a schneel-zug.

Every moment had its new interest. The trains were filled with happy, confident soldiers in fresh uniforms, their caps decorated with the Austrian and Hungarian colors and branches from pine trees, made my throat contract. Fine looking, healthy, frank-eyed, splendid fellows, all just at the early threshold of manhood.

With flowers in their military caps and songs upon their lips; with faith and confidence in the justice of their cause; with a love for all mankind, but convinced like the first Christians of the righteousness of their cause, they go joyfully into the hell of battle. The trains, long and lime-splattered, which lay alongside to let us pass, or which pass us as we went, tell the next story.

The flower, dried and faded, still remain in their mud-stained caps. Their eyes are sunken and haunted by the visions of the most frightful hell living man ever witnessed. Their lips have forgotten how to smile. Their bodies bear wounds. They are sore and filled with the pain of long days and endless nights in wet, cold, muddy trenches. Besides their frightful wounds, they have cholera, dysentery, typhoid and hollow coughs which rack them like the last cough of a consumptive.

Of ammunition and supplies there seems no scarcity. Long trains bearing cannons, blankets, wagons, ammunition never end. They are everywhere on the rail and roads. When I got up at daylight we were running parallel with a road. The road was lined with wagons. I counted 500 and gave it up. When our train usually took a different course, I saw quite a long while after, an end or part of that caravan, winding between two hills.

Clocks Everywhere

I notice the clocks are going. I would know by this alone that we are out of Galicia. There are clocks everywhere in Galicia. On the walls, on tables, on stairways, on buildings. I even found one under my bed in Sanok. I am convinced the natives like the look of clocks. There must be something in the white face with its twelve Roman figures especially fascinating to them. Otherwise they would not buy them. For not a clock in all Galicia goes, not even the clocks in the station.

In Hungary they make their clocks work. The beautiful landscape, the well-tilled fields, the busy, prosperous-looking people, the seemingly good roads all tell a different story.

No longer can I tell the story of life everywhere. Truly the railways are admirable, but at every station a large force are busy with line and brooms, the type made familiar to us by Lehar's popular opera, are doing best of the work. Cholera may be in their midst, but these energetic people will fight it every inch of the way.

I began to say that Prince Cray's train is Zug 141 D. It is one of six (and a 1/2) to New York where he has been out and maintained by attended the New York Auto Show. The Knights of the Magyar Cross. He reports that the demand for State eticles and their members maintain these trains.

Pleased the Kaiser

"We have made such a record," said Prince Cray to me, "that the German Emperor has asked us to establish a branch of our society in Germany."

Wednesday, Nov. 1.—Three soldiers died in Prince Cray's train last night. Once the thought of three deaths on one's train in one night would have been appalling, but here, where death is everywhere, where the sight of dead and dying men is as familiar to me as sparrows in New York, and great hospitals not far off, it is like a scourge sweeping the world. One stands dumb, despairing, dry-eyed before the vastness of the misery.

Prince Cray fed us twice again from his splendid kitchen. Without him we should have had to exist on our biscuits. We stop continually, but not where we can obtain food. Indeed, the small, dingy-covered stations we have passed are not lavishing. There is nothing new. The day repeats yesterday.

Thursday, Nov. 5.—I took my shoes off last night. My right shoe would not behave. With malicious devilry it plucked my foot with desperation. I took both shoes off. I had my face washed this morning. The engine is the willing pump for the whole crowd. Colonel John brought me his rubber basin and showed me how to lift off the cushion and place the basin on the seat. The soap felt delicious.

We breakfasted in a station with a lot of officers who watched us with interest. We had tea with rum, rolls or light bread, the first I have seen in Europe, and two boiled eggs. One of mine was fresh. Some had worse luck, others better. Prince Cray lost two more soldiers by death last night. That is five out of 130.

Remarkable Recoveries.

"I have had soldiers frightfully wounded," Prince Cray told me, "who have made extraordinary recoveries. One man had three shots. One entered his forehead and came out at the back of his head. One entered the base of the head at the back and came out on the opposite side at the temple and one shot went through his leg. Five weeks after, when I went to see him, he jumped to his feet and saluted."

"I had another more horrible," he continued. "A man had his entire lower jaw torn off with a shrapnel. His tongue hung out on his neck and chest. He had been five days in the trenches after receiving his wounds before the firing ceased long enough to let him be carried away. He was famished. We inserted a tube in his throat. He fought vigorously, as he thought it would hurt. But we insisted and poured soup into him. The moment he felt the soup in his stomach he made frantic efforts for more. He was wild for food. We could not feed him enough. Now they are making a new jaw in the hospital and he is recovering."

When Prince Cray was told how eagerly the poor fellows demanded more food, he laughed delightedly, showing how happy he felt to be able to give some comfort to the suffering.

Great strings of wild geese floating like worms in the sky mingle with the white clouds in the blue above us. Aeroplanes, whose whizzing motors warn us of their approach long before they are visible, come and go. We are left to speculate whether they are friend or foe. The strongest class does not disclose their identity.

Many of the men carry alcohol lamps. They are always "looking out" as they express it. Some of them seem to be eternally eating. At one place we stopped a ragged bare-footed woman, with an old shawl wrapped around her head, stood watching our waiting train. Some of our party talked to her and finally persuaded her to go to the cluster of houses in the valley way below and get them some chickens. She returned after a long trip with four young broilers—pullets. She said they cost five kronen—one dollar. A man hid four kronen on the ground and grabbed the chickens. The woman protested. Either give back her chickens or give her five kronen. The man left her crying. Took the chickens to the other side of the train and killed them.

Championed the Woman.

The woman covered her face with her ragged shawl, crying. I had maintained a very careful attitude up to this moment, but here my sense of justice prevented my being silent. I went to the man protesting. "Either give the woman what she asks," I said, "or give back her chickens."

"She's had enough," he said, going on with his butchering.

"It is not right or fair," I urged. "If you don't give her the right amount, now you have killed her chickens. I shall pay her."

"Give her another kronen," several other men advised. He would not, but his friend did. The woman kissed my hand. Several of the men threw pellets at her and chased her away. Down the valley side she went, a forlorn, bare-footed figure in a ragged, faded shawl.

"The men had a great feast of chicken and rice. I made my dinner of five biscuits, postage stamp size. I could only eat chicken under some conditions. This was not one of them. Any rate I was not invited to eat. I ate no light. It is dark at five. I have no time to try to patch on my night's rest on the slippery edge of my compartment seat.

One entered the base of the head at the back and came out on the opposite side at the temple and one shot went through his leg. Five weeks after, when I went to see him, he jumped to his feet and saluted."

"I had another more horrible," he continued. "A man had his entire lower jaw torn off with a shrapnel. His tongue hung out on his neck and chest. He had been five days in the trenches after receiving his wounds before the firing ceased long enough to let him be carried away. He was famished. We inserted a tube in his throat. He fought vigorously, as he thought it would hurt. But we insisted and poured soup into him. The moment he felt the soup in his stomach he made frantic efforts for more. He was wild for food. We could not feed him enough. Now they are making a new jaw in the hospital and he is recovering."

When Prince Cray was told how eagerly the poor fellows demanded more food, he laughed delightedly, showing how happy he felt to be able to give some comfort to the suffering.

Great strings of wild geese floating like worms in the sky mingle with the white clouds in the blue above us. Aeroplanes, whose whizzing motors warn us of their approach long before they are visible, come and go. We are left to speculate whether they are friend or foe. The strongest class does not disclose their identity.

Many of the men carry alcohol lamps. They are always "looking out" as they express it. Some of them seem to be eternally eating. At one place we stopped a ragged bare-footed woman, with an old shawl wrapped around her head, stood watching our waiting train. Some of our party talked to her and finally persuaded her to go to the cluster of houses in the valley way below and get them some chickens. She returned after a long trip with four young broilers—pullets. She said they cost five kronen—one dollar. A man hid four kronen on the ground and grabbed the chickens. The woman protested. Either give back her chickens or give her five kronen. The man left her crying. Took the chickens to the other side of the train and killed them.

Championed the Woman.

The woman covered her face with her ragged shawl, crying. I had maintained a very careful attitude up to this moment, but here my sense of justice prevented my being silent. I went to the man protesting. "Either give the woman what she asks," I said, "or give back her chickens."

"She's had enough," he said, going on with his butchering.

"It is not right or fair," I urged. "If you don't give her the right amount, now you have killed her chickens. I shall pay her."

"Give her another kronen," several other men advised. He would not, but his friend did. The woman kissed my hand. Several of the men threw pellets at her and chased her away. Down the valley side she went, a forlorn, bare-footed figure in a ragged, faded shawl.

"The men had a great feast of chicken and rice. I made my dinner of five biscuits, postage stamp size. I could only eat chicken under some conditions. This was not one of them. Any rate I was not invited to eat. I ate no light. It is dark at five. I have no time to try to patch on my night's rest on the slippery edge of my compartment seat.

Manager Lodge has assembled for Mr. O'Brien's third annual tour a company of comedians and singers of rare good quality including many of the highest salaried and most famous artists of the burnt cork realm. In addition to the star, Neil O'Brien, for years recognized as the peer of black face character comedians, the supporting list of comedians include Harry Von Fossen, an end man and monologist, who returns to minstrelsy this season after a year's absence in which he played an important role in a big musical production; Eddie Mazier, now in his third season with this company and considered one of the most unctious and bright stars of the semi-circle; Pete Detzel, Major Nowak, Doran and Strong, and a score of others to keep the fun moving swiftly.

The array of vocalists is a favorable one, all the soloists having been selected with great care, and from a singing standpoint the organization is promised as being supreme. The star vocalists include David Morris, a phenomenal basso, James Barad, tenor; Leslie Berry, baritone; Charles R. Wright, tenor; Jonathan Haw, tenor; F. B. Hodges, basso; and Billy Curran, tenor, with a supporting ensemble of trained voices and a large orchestra which is again under the direction of Frank Fuhrer.

The special features are of that same class that has previously characterized that O'Brien show. For his own act, Mr. O'Brien has written a new sketch of humorous negro life which he calls "Demon Rum or a Dry Town", and as its title indicates it deals in a very laughable manner with the temperance question and affords the star and several of his company unlimited opportunities for mirth compelling comedy in situation and dialogue. Pete Detzel has staged another big dancing number embracing several special features, notably the appearance of George P. Peduzzi, a European impersonator with a wonderful Parisian wardrobe, Eddie Mazier and Major Nowak in a new act, and Doran and Strong and Pete Detzel in characteristic dancing specialties. The new first part scene is promised as beautiful and attractive. It is called the "Futurist Atelier", and represents the very latest thing in art, while all the other scenes are more ponderously elaborate.

CADILLAC PRODUCTION INCREASING

Half Million Dollars Worth of New Equipment Now Working

Production is rapidly increasing at the Cadillac Motor Car Company plant, according to General Manager W. C. Leland. "When we had developed the eight cylinder engine up to a point where we felt absolutely sure of our ground and staking our reputation on it," said Mr. Leland, "the most gigantic part of the task was still before us."

Notwithstanding our equipment, amounting in value to more than five million dollars, it is quite inadequate for the production of the new car.

"Practically every single part of the new car called for new machinery, new fixtures and new tools for its making."

"Of course, much of the former equipment could be utilized by re-designing and re-building, yet the new equipment has involved an investment of more than a half million dollars."

"When it is considered that after we finally decided to bring out the eight-cylinder car, it was then necessary to design, manufacture, install and get into working order hundreds of new automatic machines, together with literally thousands of special lugs, gauges, fixtures, tools, etc., the task was not a small one."

"We now have many parts ready to assemble for more than 5,000 cars. There were a few parts, which, while they have been coming through in fair quantities, were not enough to make maximum production possible. But all new machinery is now here and installed. About 5,500 men are employed. Some departments are working with a day and night shift and are looking forward to a full production in a short time."

POLICE WILL KEEP EYE ON OFFENDERS

Must Make Good on Promise to Court.

Judge McCabe of the Dover district court has instructed the police of that city to keep an eye on those who have been given suspended sentences on promise to improve. They must keep away from saloons and it will be up to the police to see that they don't violate the promise made to the court. If they fail to make good, the mittimus will be issued without delay.

This ruling was made by Judge McCabe when he heard the cases of six drunks on Monday. They all had the hard luck story and asked for another chance to do better. The judge made inquiries into each instance and gave five of the offenders a chance and made their sentences subject to the mittimus of the court.
